Sunday, July 26 and Saturday, August 1, 2026

We need 30 drivers for the July autoX by July 11th, to see if we can hold the event. You can register after July 11th for the July autoX, if we have enough drivers by July 11th.

If you register for both the July 26th (Sunday) AND the August 1st (Saturday) autoXs at the same time, you will save $20.00. You will be charged after the August AutoX.

If you register for both AutoXs, but find you can only make one, please let the ESCA Secretary know so she can cancel the AutoX that you can not make. You will be charged the full price for the AutoX that you do make, after the AutoX.

Guests are also welcome to the discount and need to have their account approved by ESCA before they can register - so please send your guest's full name and email address to the ESCA Secretary. Weekend Escape: Muddy Hollow Trail + Point Reyes Treats

Hike Highlight: Muddy Hollow Trail

If you want a quiet coastal hike without big climbs, Muddy Hollow is a great pick. Last August, I convinced Chris to join me, and it ended up being one of our favorite easy hikes. It's about 5 miles round-trip, mostly flat, and good for beginners. The trail takes you through wetlands and open coastal scrub before leading to a stretch of beach you can only reach on foot. It's peaceful, wide open, and the kind of spot that makes you pause for a minute.

We went with a group from work and planned to meet everyone later for lunch in Point Reyes Station. But we got turned around on the drive out, had no cell service, and missed the meet-up. Since we'd already been to the Cowgirl Barn in Point Reyes before and loved it, we headed there again without hesitation. Their grilled cheese is honestly worth the detour. It's sourdough filled with a mild, melty cheese, plus blue cheese crumbles, thick bacon, and a fresh stone fruit compote. Simple idea, ridiculously good.

A Stroll Through Town

Point Reyes Station is small but full of things to check out. Walking through the local galleries was a nice break after the hike. Toby's Feed Barn was the surprise of the day — part gallery, part actual feed store, and full of random little finds. They feature a rotating lineup of local artists, and for a couple weeks each year they shift to a multi-artist show focused on animals. They're also hosting a classic car show on October 3rd if anyone's looking for an outing to plan.

We ended the afternoon at Heidrun Meadery. I'd spotted it on the drive in, and their sparkling, champagne-style meads were a fun way to wrap up the day. They use honeys from both the West Coast and more unusual places, and each pour tasted a little different — light, floral, and easy to sip.

The Drive That Ties It All Together

Fog in the trees in the morning, wide blue skies by the afternoon — classic Northern California coast. A simple hike, great food, a little art, and a mead tasting made for a perfect Point Reyes day trip.

Editor's Note: The Heidrun Meadery tour was a favorite ESCA Tour in June 2017, plus, they sell wonderful honey.

Performance Tires

California is not completely banning performance tires, but it is pushing proposed regulations that would prohibit the sale of tires that fail to meet strict rolling resistance efficiency standards. [1 (<https://www.energy.ca.gov/publications/2026/californias-proposed-replacement-tire-efficiency-program>), 2]

Here are the key details of the proposed California Energy Commission (CEC) rules:

* The Impact: Tires prioritizing maximum grip over fuel economy—like certain track-focused and high-performance tires—may no longer be legally sold in the state. [1 (https://www.autospies.com/mobile/article_mobile.aspx?artid=129704), 2]

* Implementation: The rules are proposed to go into effect on January 1, 2028. [1 (<https://autos.yahoo.com/policy-and-environment/articles/california-wants-regulate-fun-tires-200000602.html>)]

* Exemptions: Winter tires, certain low-volume production tires, and Light Truck (LT) tires are exempt. Ultra High Performance (UHP) tires are proposed to be exempt until 2031, after which they will need to meet relaxed efficiency requirements. [1 (https://www.reddit.com/r/tires/comments/1tu3uc7/california_might_be_banning_all_your_favorite/)]

* Not a Driving Ban: The legislation only targets the retail sale of these tires in the state. It is not a ban on driving them. [1]

Critics of the policy, such as automotive enthusiasts and the Specialty Equipment Market Association (SEMA), argue the mandate will harm consumers by limiting options, increasing upfront costs, and pushing drivers to replace tires more frequently.
