Electric Expo, Demo Days, and the EV Question

Last August, I attended the second Electric Expo at Alameda Point. The event was advertised as an opportunity to explore not just electric cars, but also other forms of transportation such as e-bikes and scooters. It also featured vendors focused on home improvement and energy-related products.

I attended with a specific goal in mind: finding a backup plan should something ever happen to Stella, my Polestar. I was hoping to test drive as many smaller EVs as the organizers would allow. The test-drive area was simple but effective, with a launch lane and a curvy handling course.

Although I did not fully achieve my goal, I enjoyed the event overall. I was able to drive a variety of vehicles, including some much larger than what I had originally come to evaluate. I also learned quite a bit from the vendors, and Alameda Point itself had seen several upgrades since my last visit. Some of the more notable manufacturers present included Cadillac, Tesla, Lucid, Volvo, and GM, which brought along the electric Hummer.

With my Plan B still in mind, I later went on a few dealership visits with a friend while she was shopping for a car. During those visits, I heard a common theme from two different salespeople: EV inventory arrives in small numbers and tends to sell quickly. Their message was essentially the same: if you see one you want, act fast.

A Volvo salesperson even suggested that the Cross Country EX30 might not be coming to the U.S. after all, despite only recently being introduced. In all honesty, he had me pegged as smitten and may have simply been trying to close a sale. Given how relaxed he was about everything else, I genuinely could not tell. He cited changing federal policies as a reason automakers were bringing fewer EVs to market. Considering Polestar had been uninvited from the future US market after all, it felt like anything was possible.

That shift may have played a role in the evolution of this year's event, which was rebranded as Demo Days.

Demo Days still had some highlights. SLATE was there with a late-stage pre-production prototype, and Rivian brought the upcoming R2. Subaru showcased the Trailseeker, a two-row EV roughly the size of an Outback. Honda, Toyota, Kia, and Hyundai also attended with a variety of vehicles available for viewing and test drives.

One particularly interesting exhibit was a trailer equipped with its own battery and motor, designed to reduce the towing burden on an EV.

Chris attended this year's event without me and noticed something interesting: among Hyundai's offerings, the EVs consistently had the longest test-drive lines, and by a significant margin. Opportunities like this are valuable because they allow people to drive multiple vehicles back-to-back and compare them in real time. Unlike a traditional dealership visit, you do not have to spend an afternoon getting fully set up with a salesperson. You can focus on the vehicles that genuinely interest you and move on when you're done.

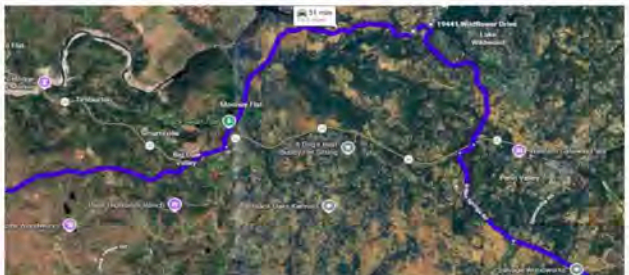

Of course, there is still a trade-off. You have to sign a waiver and hand over your contact information to the manufacturers. I still receive a monthly email from Lucid despite having no plans to buy one anytime soon.

As I tried to understand why this year's event seemed more hybrid-friendly, and why there appears to be the potential for fewer EVs in the market over the next few years, I spent some time looking into what might be driving the changes. The explanations I found generally centered on consumer demand, with many buyers still hesitant to commit to a fully electric vehicle and instead preferring hybrid options.

Personally, I see that trend as a step backward, though I recognize that I have my own biases. What I do know is that the long lines for EV test drives suggest there is still genuine interest in electric vehicles. Whatever direction the market ultimately takes, it seems clear that the appetite for EVs has not disappeared.

SVR October Surprise TSD Rally 2026

The October Surprise Rally is a time-speed-distance road rally approximately 120 miles in length and 4 hours in duration that will utilize mostly low volume rural roads through lightly populated areas of Placer, Yuba, and Nevada counties. Scoring will be done using the Richta system.

Start: Taylor Park-N-Ride Lot located between Brookfields Restaurant and Sunsplash in Roseville
Finish: Oak Leaf Café in Quarry Ponds on Douglas in Granite Bay
Registration: 9:00 AM
Safety meeting: 9:30 AM
First Car Out: 10:01 AM

*Now here you go again, you know to watch for Freedom
 While writing A's and B's around the town
 It's only right when you aren't following the cheeses
 But listen carefully to the sound of the road names
 Lest the gimmicks drive you mad
 Overthinking where you've been
 Or if you're lost
 And if you've been had...
 (to the tune of Fleetwood Mac, Dreams)*

This year's AB/C Rallye is what it says on the outside of the box; a Krafty casserole of cassette tape mixups and kar-a-oke mayhem. There might be Werewolves of London involved somewhere in there, too, but we can definitely guarantee some fresh drive time tunes and stretchy warpings of reality and road rules to usher in October. Just try not to get lost in the mozzarella sticks.

Join us this Saturday, October 3rd, for Fleetwood Mac & Cheese, aka Munster Mashup 2026!

This is an in-person, A/B and Key of C style gimmick car rallye. Start between 11am and 1pm (Pacific Time) at Cuesta Park (685 Cuesta Park, opposite Montalto Dr in Mountain view) with a rallye school for newcomers, beginners, and novices at noon. The finish is by 4:20 pm at a local restaurant. See more info on the TRC website, or email the Rallyemaster. Invite friends to join you or enter as another team. We always welcome more people!

September 5th Autocross

By Craig Hammond

ESCA's September 5th autocross brought out 43 drivers for a beautiful day of competition. We owe special thanks to TamaraWoolever and Charlie Sawyer, who kept the timing computer running smoothly all day, and to Guy Southern for getting things set up in the morning and making sure the tech side was ready to go. Congratulations to Stacy O'Connell, who edged out rival Grady Carter for first place. Grady took a strong second and Roy Peterka powered his 2023 Civic Type R to a well-earned third.

After the event, about ten drivers met at Mr. Chili's Tap Room on Montgomery Drive to swap stories and unwind. Our next event is November 1st, and remember, it's a double points event, so there's plenty of opportunity to make up ground on your nearest rival. I'll be calculating points and sending out standings ahead of the event. Hope to see you there.

Long Ago in Pit Stop October 1969

By Bob Jenkins

The first and second pages were all about the 1969 Sports Car Olympics held at Squaw Valley and attended by 19 ESCA members. The first day (Saturday) was the Rallye to the Valley the Concours and a Sports Car Quiz in the evening. Only Tom & Julie Ellis in their Cobra placed in the Concours, while Phyllis Arack and Julie Ellis took awards in the Quiz. For Sunday there was the Rallye in the Valley in which Bob Jenkins and his Navigator took a second and Tom & Julie Ellis took a first. ESCA was putting on the Funkhana and 7 ESCA members came up for the day to help out with the event. Tom & Julie Ellis took a first in class and were the only ESCA members to place. The other event for the day was an autocross where Frank Jurin in his Cobra took a first in class and Tom Ellis in his Cobra took second. Paul Reichardt took first in his class, Larry Wendt took second in his class, Pat Wallace took first and Phyllis second in their class. The finally event of the day was a T&D Rally and Debbie & Leigh Miller placed third in class. On Monday the only event was an autocross, which they called a Slalom and this time Tom Ellis took first in class with Frank Jurin second and once again Paul Reichardt took first in class, Terry Siedentopf took a 3rd in class, Pat Wallace took first and Phyllis Arack took third in class. ESCA members Terry & Jan Eaton showed up to cheer on the group. Then it was time for the Banquet and the final awards and for the first time in ESCA history members made the top 25 with Tom Ellis taking 13th and Julie 16th and the Best Datsun Award was taken by Debbie Miller. Frank Jurin won a door prize of a Tape Deck. Then it was time to load the cars and head down the hill for home.
